

GET GOOD HATCH FROM INCUBATOR

Moisture and Ventilation Are Most Important Factors in Securing Normal Chick.

SEVERAL METHODS ARE USED

Less Danger of Getting Too Much Moisture Into Machine by Sprinkling or Soaking Floor of the Incubator Room.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

With the continuing drop in price, potatoes have receded from their temporary status of delicacy, and are assuming their old rank as a great American staple food. This is to be assumed from figures lately compiled by the bureau of crop estimates, United States Department of Agriculture, which shows that between harvest time and January 1, this year, 285,172,000 bushels of potatoes were produced.

Moisture and ventilation are closely related factors in incubation, the amount of each depending upon the other. The former is one of the uncertain factors, for as yet no satisfactory rules have been evolved which cover all conditions. Good hatches are secured both with and without using moisture, under apparently similar conditions, while each operator generally works out his own method of securing the best results.

Many methods are used to supply moisture in incubators, such as sprinkling eggs with warm water at about 100 degrees Fahrenheit, or placing a pan of water, a receptacle containing moist sand, or a wet sponge below the egg tray. Another common method of supplying moisture is to sprinkle or soak the floor of the incubator room or to place a pan of water under the lamp. There is less danger of getting too much moisture in the incubator by this method than by putting moisture directly into the egg chamber.

Exceptionally Good Hatch. If a moisture tray or sponge has been added to a non-moisture machine, it should generally be taken out before the chicks pip.

The question of moisture depends largely on the place where the machine is located. If run in a room in a dwelling house, it is frequently necessary to add moisture even to non-moisture machines, while such machines run in an ordinary cellar in the same building might not need extra moisture. When a large number of machines is operated in one room, extra moisture is more necessary than if only a few are kept together. More moisture must be supplied in a very dry than in a humid climate.

Correct Conditions. Water on the glass floor of the incubator during hatching time is the best indication of correct moisture conditions during incubation. A good way to learn the proper amount of evaporation during incubation is to set one or two hens when starting the incubator, and compare the size of the air cell in the eggs under these two conditions when testing on the seventh and fourteenth days. As the weather becomes warmer more moisture is generally used than earlier in the season. Many operators add moisture only during the latter part of the hatch, generally on the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth days.

GROWING SOY BEANS FOR HAY

Meeting With Much Favor by Those Who Are Farming on Light or Sandy Soils.

Soy beans for emergency hay purposes have grown rapidly in favor during the last few years, especially among those who are farming the sandier soils where clover and alfalfa are not likely to do so well. Unlike millets and Sudan grass, both relatively low in protein, soy bean hay is very high in digestible protein, being about equal to alfalfa hay. Although it is a little difficult to cure, the palatability and high feeding value of this hay make it a very desirable forage.

Place for Brood Cows.

Brood cows with runs should be placed on ground where the grass is green and tender and as fast as it is eaten off, the cow and run should be moved to a place where the grass is plentiful.

Lie on Hogs.

Of the remedies commonly used for lice on hogs, creosote is probably the cheapest and the most effective. As it kills not only the lice, but the ants as well as any application.

Do Not Crowd Chicks.

Blackhead, mites caught in the very early stages, is usually fatal and the stoutest poult will recover.

POTATOES ASSUMING THEIR FORMER RANK

Have Receded From Temporary State as Delicacy.

Crop of 1920 Was Largest in History of Country, Amounting to 430,458,000 Bushels—Steady Drop in Prices.

Good Potatoes of Uniform Size.

900 bushels of tubers were moved off from the farms on their way to the table. This is 56,709,000 bushels more than left the farms in the corresponding period a year ago, or a half bushel additional for every man, woman and child in the United States.

The potato crop of 1920 was the largest in the history of the country, amounting to 430,458,000 bushels, and of these only 145,280,000 bushels are estimated as remaining in the hands of growers and dealers January 1. In 1919 the crop was 255,773,000 bushels, and the amount in the hands of growers and dealers January 1, 1920, was estimated at 127,400,000 bushels.

When the potato crop has been large, and normal conditions, the stocks of January 1 usually have been large, and in years of usual production, before 1918, the stocks of January 1 amounted to only one-third of the crop, and were smaller than the average of the years preceding 1918, when the production was much less.

Statistics of the department believe the greater consumption of potatoes has been the cause of the drop in prices. For the entire country the average price received by growers was 83 cents in 1919, compared with 81 cents in 1918, 81 cents in 1917, 81 cents in 1916, 81 cents in 1915, 81 cents in 1914, 81 cents in
